

Don't leave me

Chapter 1 by Kira Atkinson (Kira Cupcake)

"You can't leave me." A white hand grabbed mine through the hole in the glass wall. Her hand was cold like she was dead but those eyes that stared at me were filled with danger. She was very much alive.

I wrenched my hand free from her icy grip. "I have to get out of here. This isn't my home. I... I was brought here?" Was I brought here? I can't remember a time before but I know full well I don't belong and neither does this baby belong in me. It's not mine, it's his.

"Take me with you." She sounded desperate. Pleading with me.

"I can't. I have to leave as soon as possible. You can hardly move." That was true. Her legs were just bone and when she stood up she swayed and almost fell right back down.

The room was cold and empty with only a bed against one wall. The other wall was glass so they could see the other person. All the time I've been here I have only known one other person to be on the other side, Bella. Bella's room was the same as mine so we couldn't even trade things to make out forced time more comfortable. Although the hole was only small it could have fit food through or a pillow. That's what I wanted. A pillow.
